Estate Management Insurance for Residential Property Owners

Residential property owners looking after private residential developments and properties with communal areas such as internal roads, footpaths or shared green areas which may all require insuring, can potentially be exposed to a liability claim should an accident occur.

It is commonplace for new residential developments to share common spaces and facilities. When purchasing a property which shares these characteristics it's important to establish the liabilities so you can cover yourselves and other residents who are legally responsible in the event of a claim.

Not all insurers have an appetite to offer public liability for land and developments on its own, and the premium can be prohibitive unless purchased through a scheme arrangement. The Gallagher scheme has been developed over the past 10 years and it is 'bespoke'.
